Marquette University invites applications for an Assistant Professor in the Department of Educational Policy and Leadership in the College of Education with a specialization in Social Studies Education. We seek teacher-scholars who have a promising or established record of research and publication, and effective teaching experiences in K-12 schools and higher education. The successful candidate will teach and advise in our undergraduate and graduate programs, conduct and publish research, engage in service activities within the University, and be part of our ongoing discussion on the role of social justice in education. Start date is August 17, 2015. Salary is competitive.

Qualifications: Applicants must have a doctorate in education or a social science content area with a focus on social studies education. The ideal candidate will have strong disciplinary content knowledge, K-12 teaching experience in the social sciences, and expertise in and a commitment to teacher education.

Marquette University, a Catholic, Jesuit institution in the city of Milwaukee, Wisconsin is committed to increasing diversity among its faculty and students. The university strives toward excellence, faith, leadership and service. The Department’s 12 full-time faculty members are an engaged and collegial group dedicated to the preparation of teachers, principals, university administrators and professors and other leaders who will live the social justice mission of the university and the College of Education. The Department of Educational Policy and Leadership offers an undergraduate major in elementary and secondary teacher education as well as a doctoral program and master’s programs in Educational Leadership, Educational Policy and Foundations and College Student Personnel Administration. We welcome candidates whose experience in teaching, research or community service has prepared them to contribute to our commitment to diversity.
