UNDERGRADUATE COURSE DESCRIPTION

Term: Spring 2017
Instructor: Dr. Mickey Mattox
Course #: THEO 1001
Section: 126
Course Title: Introduction to Theology
Topic: God, Creation, Humankind

Description:

This course introduces Theology, an academic discipline concerned on the one hand with the knowledge of God, and on the other hand with the difference God makes for the way we see and understand our world, our selves. In this course we will examine three topics central to the task and purpose of Theology: God, Creation, and Humankind. These topics could also be posed as a series of inter-related questions:

• “Is there a God, and if so what is God like? How can we know?”
• “Assuming there is a God, what difference does or should that make to the way we perceive (and receive!) our world?”
• “Assuming there is a God who made the world and everything in it, what difference does or should that make to the way we see ourselves, other people, and our world?”
